

New hire checklist

The welcome email checklist	Warm greetings: Craft a personalized welcome email introducing the new hire to the team and the company culture.
	Essential information: Provide details about the first day, including location, time, dress code, and necessary documents.
	☐ Tech set-up: Offer clear instructions for setting up email, access to company tools, and necessary accounts.
	☐ Team introduction: Include a brief overview of the new hire's team members and their roles.
	Company values: Highlight key company values that resonate with the organization's culture.
	Welcome note: Attach a short message from the CEO or a team leader welcoming the new hire.
	Buddy assignment: Assign a buddy to help the new hire navigate their first weeks and answer questions.
	Parking information: If applicable, provide details about parking arrangements and any necessary permits.
Pre-onboarding checklist	New hire paperwork checklist: Ensure all legal and administrative documents are ready for the new hire's review and signature.
Pre-onboarding checklist	administrative documents are ready for the new hire's
Pre-onboarding checklist	administrative documents are ready for the new hire's review and signature.Training materials: Share relevant training materials or pre-
Pre-onboarding checklist	 administrative documents are ready for the new hire's review and signature. Training materials: Share relevant training materials or prereading resources to help them hit the ground running. Access arrangements: Coordinate system access, building
Pre-onboarding checklist	 administrative documents are ready for the new hire's review and signature. Training materials: Share relevant training materials or prereading resources to help them hit the ground running. Access arrangements: Coordinate system access, building entry, and any required security clearances. Emergency contacts: Request emergency contact
Pre-onboarding checklist	 administrative documents are ready for the new hire's review and signature. Training materials: Share relevant training materials or prereading resources to help them hit the ground running. Access arrangements: Coordinate system access, building entry, and any required security clearances. Emergency contacts: Request emergency contact information from the new hire for safety purposes. FAQ document: Provide a document addressing common
Pre-onboarding checklist	 administrative documents are ready for the new hire's review and signature. Training materials: Share relevant training materials or prereading resources to help them hit the ground running. Access arrangements: Coordinate system access, building entry, and any required security clearances. Emergency contacts: Request emergency contact information from the new hire for safety purposes. FAQ document: Provide a document addressing common questions about the onboarding process. Virtual tour: Share a virtual tour of the office space or

First-day checklist	Warm welcome: Have someone ready to greet the new hire and give them a tour of the office or virtual workspace.
	 Introduction sessions: Schedule introductions with team members, supervisors, and key stakeholders.
	Equipment handover: Provide necessary tools, devices, and ensure the workstation is ready.
	Welcome kit: Prepare a small welcome package with company-branded merchandise and essentials.
	Office etiquette: Share a document outlining office etiquette and norms to help the new hire assimilate smoothly.
	Coffee or lunch: Plan a casual coffee or lunch session with the new hire's immediate team members.
	☐ IT support contact: Provide the contact information for IT support in case of any technical issues.
	Company policies: Share key company policies and procedures that the new hire should be aware of.
First-week checklist	Role and expectations: Conduct comprehensive orientation sessions about the job role, responsibilities, and performance expectations.
	performance expectations. Company overview: Offer insights into the company's performance expectations. Company overview: Offer insights into the company's history, mission, values, and long-term goals. Initial tasks: Assign tasks that allow the new hire to apply
	 Company overview: Offer insights into the company's history, mission, values, and long-term goals. Initial tasks: Assign tasks that allow the new hire to apply their skills and get a feel for their role. Peer networking: Arrange informal meetings with peers
	 Company overview: Offer insights into the company's history, mission, values, and long-term goals. Initial tasks: Assign tasks that allow the new hire to apply their skills and get a feel for their role. Peer networking: Arrange informal meetings with peers from different departments to encourage networking. Daily check-ins: Establish brief daily check-in sessions to
	 Company overview: Offer insights into the company's history, mission, values, and long-term goals. Initial tasks: Assign tasks that allow the new hire to apply their skills and get a feel for their role. Peer networking: Arrange informal meetings with peers from different departments to encourage networking. Daily check-ins: Establish brief daily check-in sessions to address any immediate concerns or questions. Skill assessment: Administer a brief self-assessment to understand the new hire's strengths and areas for

First-month checklist	Feedback channels: Establish regular feedback sessions to address any questions or concerns the new hire may have.
	Training plan: Outline the training schedule for the upcoming months, including any workshops or courses.
	Mentorship match: If applicable, pair the new hire with a mentor who can guide them through their professional journey.
	Cross-functional exposure: Arrange shadowing opportunities with other departments to broaden their understanding.
	Goal setting: Collaborate with the new hire to set clear performance goals for the first few months.
	Social event: Organize a team-building or social event to help the new hire further integrate into the team.
	Resource person: Identify a specific person the new hire can reach out to for questions related to office resources.
	Learning budget: Inform the new hire about any budget allocated for their professional development and learning resources.